Word vs. LaTeX: The Ultimate Text-Editing Cage Match

One's a Hot Mess, the Other's a Typesetting Superhero
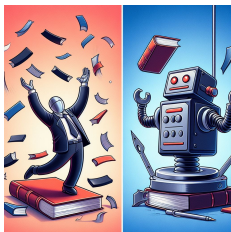

Aayush Adhikari

$21^{st} Kartik, 2019$

Word:
*spends forever messing with styles,
only to have them go haywire*
"WHY IS THIS HEADING PINK
AND LOOKS LIKE A COMIC BOOK?!" throws a tantrum

LaTeX:
types a few magic words
"My documents are always pretty.
Always." puts on sunglasses

Referencing Rumble: LaTeX Wins by a Mile

Word:
"Was that Table 1 or Appendix A? I'm lost!" throws book in the air

LaTeX:
"I automatically fix your messy references. I'm like a robot, but smarter." shows off shiny metal parts

LaTeX:
"My tables are built like a tank. Nothing can break them." puts on a table helmet

Word:
"Just try adding a row. Go on, I dare you!" runs away screaming

Word:
"Math is hard. And makes me cry."
hugs a calculator

LaTeX:
"Math? Easy peasy. I'm a math whiz." does a backflip

Collaboration: Word is a Train Wreck, LaTeX is a Dream Team

LaTeX:
works together smoothly, like a well-oiled machine
"We're a team. We make awesome documents together." gives everyone a high five

Word:
everyone fights over who changed what
"WHO MESSED UP MY PERFECT DOCUMENT?!" pulls out hair

The Final Verdict: LaTeX is the Undisputed Champion!

Word is a big mess. LaTeX is a superhero. You know who to choose.